COURSE DESCRIPTIONS

WGS271Y1: Gender in Popular Culture
A critical examination of institutions, representations and practices associated with contemporary popular, mass-produced, local and alternative culture. Students will develop skills in media literacy in relation to representations of race, class and gender in a variety of popular cultural forms. Lectures will be delivered online per the meeting schedule. Recordings of lectures will likely also be available for students to view asynchronously. It is recommended that students have a computer with a microphone and camera in order to participate in online activities.

WGS355H1: Gendered Labour Around the World
This course will focus on masculinities and femininities in workplace settings, with an emphasis on service work around the world. We will discuss workers’ lived experiences of gender regimes which are embedded within the dynamics of class, race and nation. The relationships between gender processes and workplace hierarchies will be explored. Lectures will be delivered online per the meeting schedule. Recordings of lectures will likely also be available for students to view asynchronously. It is recommended that students have a computer with a microphone and camera in order to participate in online activities.

WGS367H1: The Politics of Gender and Health
Examines diverse traditions and normative models of health (e.g. biomedicine, social constructionist, indigenous health) in conjunction with analyses of the origin, politics, and theoretical perspectives of contemporary Womens Health Movements. Topics may include fertility, sexuality, poverty, violence, labour, ageing, (dis)ability, and health care provision. Lectures will be delivered online per the meeting schedule. Recordings of lectures will likely also be available for students to view asynchronously. It is recommended that students have a computer with a microphone and camera in order to participate in online activities.

WGS373H1: Gender and Violence
An interdisciplinary study of gendered violence in both historical and contemporary contexts including topics such as textual and visual representations; legal and theoretical analyses; structured violence; war and militarization; sexual violence; and, resistance and community mobilization. Lectures will be delivered online per the meeting schedule. Recordings of lectures will likely also be available for students to view asynchronously. It is recommended that students have a computer with a microphone and camera in order to participate in online activities.

WGS397H1: The Politics of Girlhood
This course communicates with the growing-field of ‘girl studies’ and provides a critical exploration of the historical, social, psychological and political definitions attached to ‘girlhood’. We will move towards a feminist understanding of how definitions of the ‘girl-child’ shape individual experience, historical narratives, cultural representations, political agendas and futures. Lectures will be delivered online per the meeting schedule. Recordings of lectures will likely also be available for students to view asynchronously. It is recommended that students have a computer with a microphone and camera in order to participate in online activities.

Course syllabi, including method of evaluation, will be available the first day of class.
